GIVE ME THIS STRANGER

Rev. Fr. Anthony Cook

Beloved in the Lord,

A blessed conclusion of the Lenten Fast to you all! May the Lord sustain us through the final days of Holy Week and bring us in joy to His Resurrection! We will take this opportunity to speak of the high points of Holy Week, and why they are particularly beloved to us.

Scenic Views on a Journey

Throughout the Fast, the Church offers to us numerous services to nourish our souls and guide us in prayer and reflection. All of these are precious, but there are certain points that are of special significance, like hills with scenic views in the course of a long hike. They give us a vantage point of the entire journey, so we can better understand the shape of the transformation that we are undergoing, and even glimpse the end before we arrive. There is a danger with this, as well; if we extend the metaphor, we note that one can often drive directly to a scenic view along a hiking trail, and skip the hike completely. But cut off from its context, that high point becomes little more than a pretty view, and hardly worth the trouble. It is the same with Holy Week. These high points are wonderful, but we must remember why they are important, so that we don't lose sight of the journey itself, or of its end. For at their proper place on the journey, these high points offer encouragement, illumination, peace, and profound joy.

The High Points of Holy Week

At Palm Sunday, we greet the Lord as the Anointed One, the Christ and Messiah, the One Who Comes in the Name of the Lord, Yahweh our God. We celebrate His entrance into Jerusalem, and also face the truth that we who receive Him in joy must also face the scandal of His Passion, and that our response to this is a crisis for us, a moment of decision that we cannot encounter unchanged.

On Holy Tuesday evening, we hear the Hymn of Kassiani, and see the Lord grant forgiveness to the sinful woman who comes in repentance to wash and dry His feet. We face a paradox, for the Lord welcomes sinners, but He also calls them and us to repentance. He seeks us out when we have estranged ourselves from Him, but when He comes to us, we face the choice to lay aside our favorite sins and follow Him, or to turn once more toward what has enslaved us before. We must be watchful.

On Holy Wednesday, we come to the Lord in our own turn to receive anointing with Holy Unction, seeking the Lord's mercy, entrusting ourselves to His will, and asking for the healing of soul and body. This is an occasion for repentance, for reconciliation with one another, and for renewing our faithful trust in the Lord, asking of Him whatever is most beneficial for our salvation.

On Holy Thursday evening, we watch and walk with the Lord as He goes to the Cross, meditating and wondering in fear and awe as our Creator bends His neck to the yoke of the Cross and takes the burden of our brokenness upon Himself. In the darkness, we see the Light of the world take His last breath and submit to death – but even as He does so, we feel that all things have suddenly changed, and what ought to be overwhelming grief gives way instead to a strange and quiet hope.

On Holy Friday evening, we celebrate the funeral service of the Lord, singing the beautiful Lamentations at the Grave before the Kouvouklion that we have decorated earlier in the day. At this service, we ask the young women of the parish to take upon themselves the role and responsibility of the Myrrh-bearing Women, who remained faithful to the Lord through His Passion and burial, and undertake to imitate them ourselves, not simply in our presence at the service, but in holding fast to the Lord in the face of the trials and griefs that come to us all throughout our lives. Then we carry the Lord's Grave Cloth (Epitaphios) in procession around the Church, singing a dirge as we go, and when we re-enter the Church, the lights that had been dim are brightened, and we shift from standing at the Tomb to waiting in Hades itself, where we hear the voice of the Lord calling for the ancient gates to be opened, so that He, the King of Glory, can enter in, to restore life and light to the uttermost depths of darkness.

On Holy Saturday, we continue this observance of the Lord's entrance into Hades, as we read and sing the book of Jonah and the Song of the Three Youths in the Fiery Furnace in Babylon, to whom the Son of God came and turned the fire into dew, delivering them from that great peril and giving a great sign of His coming salvation. In celebration of the Lord's Triumph over Death, we throw bay leaves throughout the Church, singing out the words of the Psalm: "Arise, O God, and judge the earth, and You shall take all the nations into Your inheritance." And then, of course, Holy Saturday evening, we gather in the darkness of the Church and receive Light from the Empty Tomb, glorifying Christ our God, Who has arisen from the dead, and we celebrate the Divine Liturgy of the Lord's Pascha surrounded by the tokens of His Victory.

A Lost Hymn, Now Restored

As we travel this journey, the high points come more and more often, until we reach the pinnacle in the depths of the night of the Lord's Resurrection. From Holy Friday evening on, everything that we do is great and glorious, and there is a sense almost of vertigo, as what we are encountering is more significant than we can comprehend, more joy than we are capable of feeling as we are, with our senses dulled by constant over-stimulation. There is one hymn, however, which expresses this collision of the mundane with the Eternal in the person of God Himself now lying dead, in poetry and music which help us to move beyond the natural limits and to recognize the glory that is being revealed to us, and it is traditionally sung during the Procession of the Epitaphios around the Church Holy Friday evening. It is a lament chanted from the perspective of Joseph of Arimathea, pleading with Pontius Pilate for the Body of Jesus.

Unfortunately it is not an easy or a short hymn, and therefore it has often been omitted from parish practice in recent decades, simply for the lack of a decent translation, or music to sing it, or time for the choirs to prepare it. In the present day, however, we have the ability to print out the text of the hymn so that everyone can follow it, and we are blessed with translators and composers who have set it to music in English, and with singers who can sing it as we walk in procession, and therefore we are able to restore it to our annual celebrations. I urge you all to read it now, and to reflect upon it as we prepare to gather together and carry the Lord for burial this coming Great and Holy Friday.

When he saw that the sun had hidden (Τὸν ἥλιον κρύψαντα)

Hymn from the 13th Century

When he saw that the sun had hidden its rays, and the veil of the Temple was rent at the death of the Saviour, Joseph came unto Pilate and entreated him, saying:

"Give me this Stranger, Who from His youth has been received as a Stranger in this world.

Give me this Stranger, whom His kinsmen killed in hatred like a stranger.

Give me this Stranger, concerning Whom I am in perplexity, seeing the strangeness of His death.

Give me this Stranger, Who knew how to take in the poor and strangers.

Give me this Stranger, Whom the Jews in their malice estranged from the world.

Give me this Stranger, that I may conceal Him in a tomb, Who being a Stranger has no place whereon to lay His head.

Give me this Stranger, to Whom His Mother on beholding Him dead cried: 'Oh my Son and my God, though my bowels be wounded, and I be pierced in my heart as I behold You dead, yet trusting in Your Resurrection, I magnify You.'"

Having therefore besought Pilate with these words, the noble Joseph receives the Saviour's body, which with fear he wrapped in linen and spices. In a tomb he placed the One Who grants unto all life everlasting, and great mercy.

I pray that we may all recognize that God Himself has come as a stranger, a ξένος, to us who have made ourselves strangers and foreigners and exiles to Him through our sin, and has by this reconciled us to Himself, and made us who were strangers to grace and love to be once again sons and daughters of His glory, heirs of the Promise, and bearers of light in this darkened and troubled world.

Christ is Risen! Χριστός Ανέστη!

With love in Christ,

+Fr. Anthony Cook
